Content: 117 photos, 3 panoramas, 3 art, plus "Day Trip" highlights of photos that will appear in a future issue of MUDPIX MAGAZINE.

A thing about clouds is that they are all different, and they don't last long. So if you can take a photo of one, then you have captured something totally unique that will never appear in the same form.

I'm a cloud gazer like many people. I love to watch them change shape and develop across the sky. This is a cloud gazing photo ebook I put together for others to enjoy who also likes to watch the clouds. These photos were shot with my Samsung Galaxy S8+ (because I didn't feel it necessary to get out my Canon) on Thursday, May 16th, 2019 of clouds over my front and back yard.

This ebook is free for your personal viewing enjoyment. On the day I shot these photos, I had hoped to get more photos than I did. The clouds were big, white, and fluffy (my favorite clouds to photograph) when I got home from work. As the evening progressed, the clouds spread across the sky and became less interesting. That's how it goes sometimes though when watching the clouds. As it began getting dark, a storm started brewing.

I am calling this ebook simply "Clouds". It's a branch of my MUDPIX MAGAZINE, and I have made consideration to make this an ongoing series for some of my cloud photography since I love to photograph the clouds so much sometimes.

MORE CLOUDS :-)

On Friday, May 17th, 2019 there was some rain throughout the morning in Opelika, AL. It must have been a peaceful rain, although I didn't get to see any of it because I was at work. I could hear the thunder outside while I was work, and it was kind of a relaxing thunder to start the day of work with.

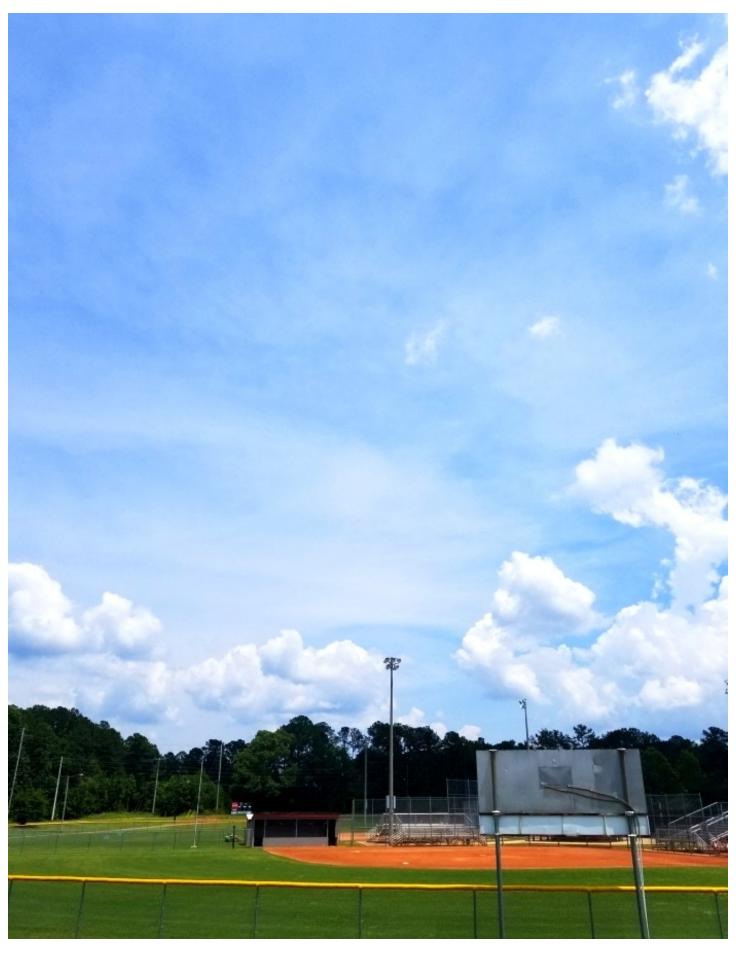

During my morning break I could see the dark clouds through the windows in the break room, but it wasn't raining at that time. When the afternoon came and I left work, the clouds turned into my favorite kind... the big white fluffy ones. So I decided to go to one of my favorite parks where I go to walk or run on the track because I know it has some great wide open views that is great for taking photos of the clouds.

Here are 98 photos and 1 panorama taken at West Ridge Baseball Park in Opelika, AL. Also in this photo set are photos taken during my drive home, plus a few shots of the field of dandelions across my front and back yards (because I was about 3 weeks overdue to cut my grass). I also got a couple of shots of a bumblebee on a dandelion.

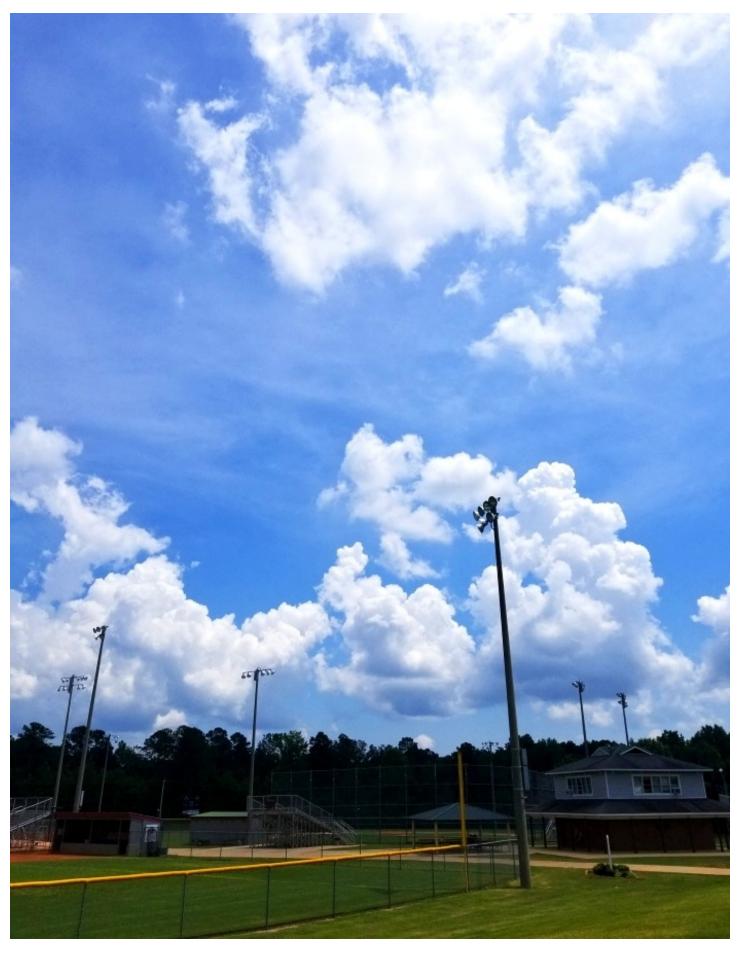

Again as with the cloud photos at the beginning of this ebook, these were shot with my Samsung Galaxy S8+.
